What Is Cookie?

A cookie is a small size data file left by website visitors on their computers or mobile devices. The cookies are widely used in the online world with default settings on your web browser to help to remember device settings, language etc. when you visit a website. The websites read these data files when the visitors first connect to the website and ensure more efficient website use and loading settings such as language faster when the visitor revisits the website.

What Are Cookie Types?

The Cookies are divided into different types depending on different criteria such as storage duration and the placer. According to such criteria, the main distinction is as follows:

COOKIE TYPE	DESCRIPTION
Session Cookies	The session cookies are valid when you use the website and continue to be valid when you close the web browser.
Persistent Cookies	These cookies are stored on your browser and stay there until you delete the cookies or the cookies expire.
Mandatory Cookies	These are the mandatory cookies to ensure proper operation of the website and enable the visitors to benefit from the website properties and offered services.
Functional and Analytic Cookies	These are the cookies that provide information about how and for what purpose you use the website to help the website to remember your preferences, ensure effective website use, to enable the website to be optimized to meet your needs. These types of cookies might include personal data due to their characteristics. For example, the language preferences for a website are functional cookies.
Tracking Cookies	The tracking cookies are first- and third-party cookies created by our website and third parties when you visit the domains. These cookies enable tracking the click and history for the domain and matching these records between different domains. These cookies are used for identifying and segmenting the users, targeting the advertisement and marketing activities and customizing the content. These cookies are not used to identify you or to make personal decisions.
First Party Cookies	The first-party cookies are cookies placed by the visited website operator.

What Are Cookie Usage Purposes?

The cookies can be used for multiple purposes. The main purposes are as follows:

- To increase website functionality and performance to improve the provided service,
- To improve the website and offer new properties on the website,
- To offer a more customized and attractive experience to the visitors,
